Details of the pre-application advice received

Hi Brian

Thank you for your email.

I can confirm that yes you will need planning permission to add a pitched roof above the existing / original flat roof front part of your home. The reason for this is that all front extensions (in planning terms the proposed pitched roof itself is an extension) need planning permission unless the whole structure falls into the 'permitted development allowance' for a new porch. A porch can be a maximum of 3 sqm in footprint and not taller than 3m in height from the lowest part of ground level to the highest part of the roof without needing planning permission. The photos below show that the floorspace of the front part of your house is larger than 3 sqm, so any roof above it will automatically need planning permission due to the area of the structure. Furthermore, I note there are steps in front of your porch door, so in terms of height, going from the lowest point of ground level in front of the door next to the steps to the tallest part of the proposed pitched roof, most likely will be taller than 3m in height so the height of the structure would fail the height requirement, even if the floorarea was below 3sqm. Therefore, I have to advise you to submit a planning application for this roof. Please see our website for information and advice on how to submit a planning application via this link:

Authority Employee/Member

With respect to the Authority, is the applicant and/or agent one of the following:

- (a) a member of staff
- (b) an elected member
- (c) related to a member of staff
- (d) related to an elected member

It is an important principle of decision-making that the process is open and transparent.

For the purposes of this question, "related to" means related, by birth or otherwise, closely enough that a fair-minded and informed observer, having considered the facts, would conclude that there was bias on the part of the decision-maker in the Local Planning Authority.

Do any of the above statements apply?

- ☒ No

 "owner" is a person with a freehold interest or leasehold interest with at least 7 years left to run.
